What is an Abdominal Aorta Duplex Ultrasound?

The test uses high frequency sound waves to create cross sectional pictures of the Abdominal Aorta. This Imaging technique allows the Physician to see the condition of the Aorta, look for plaque and aneurysms. An Aneurysm is a widening of the Aorta. The Abdominal Aorta lies in the middle of your abdomen, and supplies your abdominal organs and the legs with blood.

How is the test done?

You will be asked to lie on your back on an exam table. Non-greasy gel will be applied to your abdomen. The Sonographer will slide an ultrasound probe up and down your abdomen. The probe will be moved in different directions. You may be asked to hold your breath.

The test is not painful, so if you experience any discomfort, please inform the Sonographer so that they may make adjustments.

After the Test is Completed:

The images and measurements will be evaluated by one of our Vascular Cardiologists, and a report will be issued. You will be contacted with the results and any recommendations for further care. The report will be in your electronic Virginia Heart chart for your Cardiologist to review, and a copy of the report will be sent to your Referring Physician. If you want any of your other Physicians to receive a copy of your results, please let the Receptionist know so that you can sign a release to allow us to send them a copy of your report.
